‘Rhythm Fest’ brings Chicago neighborhoods together

Laura Molzahn

Dance Card

Basically a tap-dance rehearsal is a matter of seeing, hearing and doing. But the music and rhythm sets the pace, the body follows. Last week, Dancin’ Door was the rhythm, the feet made their own music.

Alexander, who has been with the group for several years, calls it a "fun" rehearsal. He says the group members "just want to have fun and dance together." And that's exactly what they did. The room was filled with energy as the dancers moved around, following the rhythm of the music.

The group is made up of people of all ages and backgrounds who come together to share their love of dance. They practice together, perform together, and support each other. And it shows. The way they move is fluid and smooth, yet powerful and dynamic. It's a beautiful thing to watch.

So if you're looking for an afternoon of fun and movement, Dancin’ Door is the place to be. Whether you're a seasoned dancer or just starting out, you're sure to have a great time.

Chicago Human Rhythm Project / Chicago Rhythm Fest

When: 7:30 p.m. Saturday
Where: Auditorium Theatre, 50 E. Congress Parkway
Tickets: $28 to $68 at 312-341-2300 or www.auditoriumtheatre.org

The Chicago Human Rhythm Project brings together dancers from all walks of life to create a unique blend of art and music. The project is dedicated to preserving and promoting the rich history of Chicago's African American communities and their contributions to the world of rhythm and blues.

This year's event promises to be even more exciting than ever, with a lineup of talented performers from across the city and beyond. Don't miss your chance to experience the magic and creativity of the Chicago Human Rhythm Project in person. Get your tickets today and prepare to be moved!